Biographical / Historical

Belford Shoumate (1903-1991) didn't want to be confined to any one particular architectural style. He is recognized for his artistry and the ability to bring his illustrative pastels to life. After studying architecture at the University of Pennsylvania he worked for Joseph Urban in New York City. Urban greatly influenced his work, especially in his interpretation of the Art Moderne style and use of color to define space. After arriving in Palm Beach in 1936, he went on to design over 500 projects in South Florida including residences, renovations and additions, and conceptual plans. Shoumate also sought to protect the existing architectural fabric of Palm Beach—he served on the Landmarks Preservation Commission and was Chairman of the American Institute of Architects (AIA) Preservation of Historic Buildings for ten years (1954-1964).

Scope and Contents

Architectural drawings by Belford Shoumate encompass his work primarily in Palm Beach and South Florida. Many projects are conceptual or renovations and additions to existing structures. Artwork by Shoumate includes pastel renderings of numerous projects, many of which are not identified. Photographic materials include documentation of Shoumate's work, of note are the Wagner house in West Palm Beach and the MacNichol Manor apartments in Delray Beach.
